

staff on the island for regularly providing names and contact numbers for researchers who might otherwise have got away without us ever knowing about them. I am also grateful to the committee and officers for their support and advice in refereeing contributions. I now retire from this post, looking forward to reading a Report when it drops through the letter box, and not before, and to only having to read each contribution once. I am glad I said yes to Peter in 1988, but as I said at the start, ten years is enough for anyone.

COMMENT FROM LFS CHAIRMAN

On behalf of the members of the LFS, I would like to thank John for his expertise and unstinting enthusiasm during the ten years he has edited the LFS Annual Report. It was a very good journal when he took it over and now it is an excellent publication, second to none in its diversity of material and academic standard. The Editor can only work with the material that he/she is given and I would also like to thank the contributors over the past ten years, and ask that the new Editor, Dr. Hayley Randle, receives the same support. We hope that you will keep contributing to the Annual Report, John, and again our sincere thanks.
